The majority of the images were taken in and around the towns and villages of Northumberland and North Yorkshire, including North Shields, Chollerford, Cullercoates, Rothbury, Knaresborough, Cambo, Selby, Paufenhaugh Bridge, Robin Hood's Bay, Camp End, Bridlington, Elmbank, Burnfoot, York, and many others. A number of photographs appear to have been taken in and around a large farm in Marden. It seems that the Royal Horse Artillery visited the area to collect a large quantity of heavy horses and this event has been well documented by the photographer. Soldiers are shown leading these magnificent animals through the farmyard, watering them, and lining them up for inspection. Other subjects include rows of cottages and other village landmarks, seaside towns with beach huts and fishing boats, farming scenes including harvesting and loading hay onto very large carts. There are several studio portraits of a large, be-whiskered gentleman, the name on each of the envelopes being "Fenwick Wilson". There are interior shots of a pharmacy showing a large array of bottles and jars surrounding the shop assistant. One box is full of negatives showing a well-attended parade on Trevor Terrace, North Shields, passing the corner shop on Lindisfarne Terrace, and many different forms of transportation, both animal and engine powered, are present throughout the collection. Much more research needs to be carried out in order to properly identify the locations and subjects recorded in this huge and fascinating photographic archive of 300+ glass, and 1200+ celluloid negatives. COLLECT ONLY.	£600-£800
